HASC Center Visited By Capital One Executives
By Moshe Cohn

In this uncertain and tumultuous economic period, when most financial institutions are seeking to curtail lending to even the most credit worthy clients, Capital One, one of the premier financial services companies in the nation and a Fortune 500 company, recently completed a financing transaction on behalf of HASC Center.

HASC Center is a renowned, not-for-profit agency that serves children and adults with developmental challenges within our communities for over three decades.

An official tour by Capital One's top executives of HASC Center's day habilitation program, residential facilities and its Blanche Kahn Family Health Center located on East 14th Street in Brooklyn, New York concluded the financing transaction.

The visitors included Capital One's president, Lynn A. Pike, and senior vice presidents Adam Ostrach and Thomas Hanrahan. By taking the time out of their busy schedules, the executives demonstrated Capital One's deep commitment to the not-for-profit sector and recognition of the sector's vital role in the enhancement of the quality of life of the most vulnerable of our community.

"I want to publicly praise Capital One for its professionalism, but more importantly for its compassion to the special needs of those served by HASC Center and to the community to which it is committed," said Abe Eisner, president of HASC Center and CEO of GFI Mortgage Bankers, who facilitated the transaction between the parties.
